

Indian Independence

Introduction

Indian independence refers to the end of British rule in India and the establishment of India as a sovereign nation on 15 August 1947. The struggle for independence lasted for many decades and involved millions of people from different regions, religions, and backgrounds.

Early Resistance

The Indian Rebellion of 1857 was one of the earliest large-scale movements against British rule. Although the rebellion was unsuccessful, it inspired future generations to continue the fight for freedom.

Formation of the Indian National Congress

The Indian National Congress (INC) was founded in 1885. It played a significant role in organizing the independence movement and bringing together leaders from across the country.

Major Leaders

Some of the most influential leaders of the independence movement were:

- Mahatma Gandhi
 - Jawaharlal Nehru
 - Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel
 - Subhas Chandra Bose
 - Bal Gangadhar Tilak
 - Bhagat Singh

Non-Cooperation Movement (1920)

Mahatma Gandhi launched the Non-Cooperation Movement to encourage Indians to boycott British institutions, goods, and services.

Salt March (1930)

In 1930, Mahatma Gandhi led the Salt March, also known as the Dandi March, to protest the British tax on salt. This event became a symbol of India's struggle for freedom.

Quit India Movement (1942)

The Quit India Movement was launched on 8 August 1942. Its goal was to demand an immediate end to British rule in India.

Independence and Partition

India gained independence on 15 August 1947. At the same time, the country was divided into two nations:

- India
- Pakistan

This division is known as the Partition of India.

Conclusion

The Indian independence movement remains one of the most significant events in world history. It demonstrated the power of unity, determination, and non-violent resistance.
